UNION SQUARE THEATRE.

The accomplished critic of the Evening Express. October 23, agys:—One of the most gratifying successes of the present busy theatrical season has been that of the Geneva Cross. at the Union Square Theatre. All the more gratifying because the play panders to namoridal taste, but tells us in lited numbers on a battling with the sense of duty in opposition to the power of love. In the present day, when there is a dearth of really good acting plays, this one comes to us all the more welcom, and there is a certain satisfaction in knowing that it has not been imported, but its a product of the soil, engendered here in our midst and brought forward to blossom fairly and prosperously. That its popular success should have been immediate, and that it continues to be held in high favor with the public, are not matters of special wonder. Kee alone is the play itself of exceptional excellence, but it receives exceptionally good treatment at the hands of the company. Miss Rose Evenings is in isputably one of the best melodramatic actresses now here the public, and the emotional intensity of her performance of the character of the heroine is traught with deep and lasting interest, while the mainty, steadings the forence the public, and the emotional intensity of her performance for the character of the heroine is traught with edge and lasting interest, while the mainty, steadings the characters form the requisitely toned accessories to these two principal figures, and the result is a picture full of harmony, symmetry and grace."
